
American Australian Association – Collection Statement - Members

Privacy

American Australian Association Limited (ACN 119 727 847) (AAA) collects your personal information when you apply for membership of AAA.

We use your information to further the objectives of AAA, which can include uses such as maintaining a database that records your interest in certain events and activities conducted by AAA. From time to time we might provide and market our services to you, or those of our sponsors. From time to time we might also use your information to fulfil associated administrative and other functions.

We may disclose your personal information to other members of AAA, whether inside or outside Australia in order to, for example, recommend your professional services. Organisations to which we might typically disclose personal information include our consultants, advisors and other service providers (for example, mailing houses). We may share your personal information with our related companies, whether within or outside Australia.

If you do not provide any of the information requested of you then we will not be able to register you as a member of AAA.

The Corporations Act 2001 (Cth) requires us to collect members' contact details.

We generally do not collect sensitive information (as defined in the Privacy Act). However, by providing any sensitive information (such as personal information concerning political opinions, membership of political associations, membership of trade or professional associations etc) you consent to us collecting or using that sensitive information. You also consent to us transferring your personal information overseas to our affiliated organisations located outside of Australia.

You have a right to access most personal information that AAA holds about you. Sometimes there may be a reason why access will not be possible. If that is the case, you will be told why.
